

My Idea is ... a pavilion in the neighborhood

In Rotterdam's Schiedam-East neighborhood, a new community initiative is taking shape at the intersection of Engelsestraat and Italiaansestraat. My plan is to construct a wooden pavilion, designed to be a central gathering place for residents. This space will allow neighbors to engage in activities like grilling and growing herbs. The area will also feature tulips planted under trees, highlighting a beloved Dutch bloom, and birdhouses to support local bird populations, enhancing biodiversity.

Wisteria will be encouraged to climb the walls of nearby houses, providing natural shade and additional food for wildlife during the summer.

This project is aimed at fostering a harmonious environment where residents can relax, socialize, and connect with nature right in their own neighborhood.
